

I was told two years ago by a CIA scientist working against his will that in truth microchips were so small they were being inserted by injection during "vaccination." This is yet another crucial reason not to have our children vaccinated.

Here is the picture proof of just how small they are. It was taken at a university in England which is developing the chip technology. Please feel free, as with everything on this site, to download it and pass it around.

David Icke

The Saturday Sun, August 14, 1999

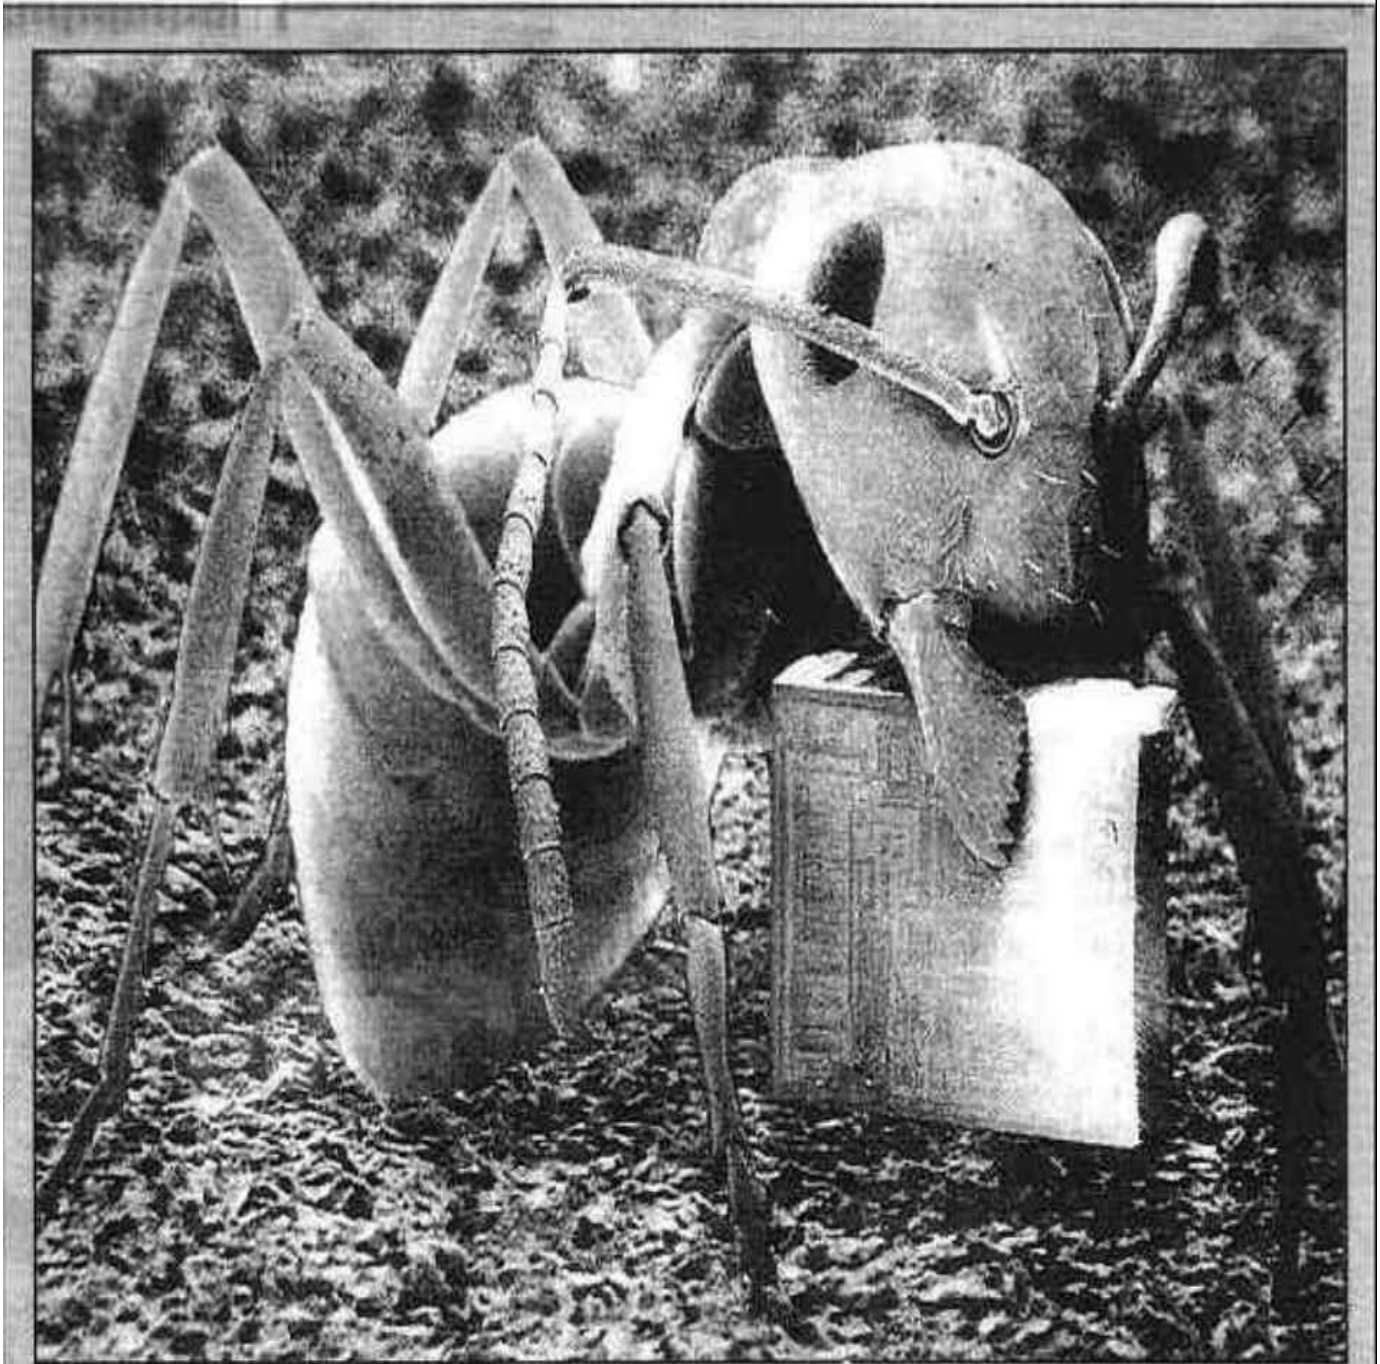

--Reuters

PHOTO ANTICS ... An ant carries a 1-mm microchip in its mandibles in a promotional photograph released by the Huddersfield University precision technology centre. The centre says it's the first in Britain to calibrate measurements and instruments to 1/10,000th of a millimetre.

Caption reads: Photo Antics ...An ant carries a 1-mm microchip in its mandibles in a promotional photograph released by the Huddersfield University precision technology centre. The centre says it's the first in Britain to calibrate measurements and instruments to 1/10,000th of a millimetre.

Click here for enlarge picture for 800 resolution
Click here for enlarge picture for 1024 resolution

--Reuters

PHOTO ANTICS ... An ant carries a 1-mm microchip in its mandibles in a promotional photograph released by the Huddersfield University precision technology centre. The centre says it's the first in Britain to calibrate measurements and instrument at 1/10,000th of a millimetre.

